St. Louis stalwart Don Killoren explained how tax policy is as easy (and frustrating) as puppy training. Here he confers with Bob McDonald.

Sandra and Al Katzenberger. Team CGO members were presented with fedoras labeled with a 4th-estate theme; Al's was "Editor in Chief."

Jerona Vrijkorte, from the Netherlands, and Luke Robitaille from Toronto, with Luke's granddad, Izzy Gleiner, and Wyn Achenbaum.

Bob Jene, Gib Halverson and Brendan Hennigan tackle the tough questions.

One of the many heady offerings on RSF's table was the brand new edition of Progress and Poverty, Vol. II in The Annotated Works of Henry George.

CGO president Dan Sullivan believes conferences should have plenty of time for open conversations.

Anthony Werner, Director of Shepheard-Walwyn Publishers, gave a thought-provoking luncheon address on "A Principled Approach to Economics."

Gordon Abiama on "The Georgist Philosophy, Africa and the Ecovillage Connection"

Erich Jacoby-Hawkins makes sure Green issues are never far from Georgists' attention.

Every conference venue should have a good photo-op stairway!

The ever-dapper Mike Curtis gave a memorable keynote speech (see page 1), which Paul Justus caught on video.

Author/Professor Kurt Widerquist (here with Mark Sullivan) gave an energetic, eye-opening talk on the need for universal basic income. Vitnae Kang's remote presentation on this panel, while intriguing, was marred by technical glitches.
